Pung, Alice, Growing Up Asian in Australia, Black Inc, 2008 (A) This engaging collection addresses the migrant experience in Australia through personal stories, and its themes enable any reader to think about issues of identity and belonging. Representing a range of genres, the anthology spans several generations and explores diverse life experiences with honesty and humour. Fifty people write about issues such as dual identities, parental misunderstandings and the challenges of meeting the expectations of others while growing up in the 'lucky' country. From trying to hide scholastic abilities in 'Exotic Rissoles' to the self explanatory 'Five ways to disappoint your Vietnamese mother', this collection will have wide appeal. Editor Alice Pung compiled the anthology to highlight the difficulties faced by generations of immigrants.

Malouf, David, Ransom, Vintage, 2009 (A) Malouf re-imagines the world of the Iliad, including a little-known episode of the Trojan Wars. Maddened by Hector's slaying of his dear friend Patroclus, Achilles takes revenge and subsequently violates Hector's corpse. Priam, King of Troy and Hector's father, journeys to Achilles' camp seeking to ransom his son's body. He travels in a donkey cart escorted only by the carter but aided by the god Hermes. The mission succeeds, delivering to Priam enrichment in life and legendary status after death. Ransom explores universal themes of paternal pride and love, and liberation of the spirit – as relevant today as in classical Greece.

Brooks, Geraldine, Year of Wonders, Fourth Estate, 2001 (A) The plague year of 1666 brought fear, confusion and grief to a small village in Derbyshire. A maid, Anna Frith, narrates her story and so traces the anguish of her community as they endure the terrors of a deadly infectious disease and self-imposed isolation. The community seeks answers in religion and superstitions as the Plague takes its toll physically, mentally and spiritually. The idealistic but driven rector, his troubled wife, and Anna are central to the unfolding tragedy in the village. The language of this novel reflects its well-researched historical basis as much as the complex nature of its subject matter.
